

THE CASE FOR INTERNATIONAL VALUE

Value stocks have outpaced their growth peers across many regions outside the U.S. for the past several years, with a particularly strong showing in 2025. Despite recent strength, the cohort remains attractively valued relative to growth. Price-to-book spreads between the cheapest and most expensive quintiles of stocks in non-U.S. developed markets remain historically wide, underscoring the continued opportunity in international value.

INTERNATIONAL VALUE REMAINS COMPELLING

We have capitalized on market strength by trimming outperformers and reallocating the proceeds into cheaper opportunities, including companies negatively impacted by temporary macroeconomic pressures or discrete, resolvable issues. As such, our International Value portfolio's price-to-normal earnings valuation remains in line with its historical average. This discipline helps preserve the portfolio's valuation advantage while maintaining a broad opportunity set.

Exhibit 2: Pzena International Value P/N¹ Relative to Universe² Median P/N

1. P/N is a ratio that measures a company's share price relative to Pzena's estimate of what a company earns across a typical business cycle.
2. Universe is the largest 1500 non-US stocks ranked by market capitalization.
Data is shown Monthly from September 30, 2010 through March 31, 2026.
As of the end of the period, the P/N for the International Value Strategy and Universe were 8.9x and 15.8x, respectively.

DEEP VALUE REIGNS SUPREME

We believe it is an excellent time to consider allocating to international value. Foregoing investment in non-U.S. markets means passing over idiosyncratic opportunities in a broad investment universe. Additionally, despite a wealth of empirical evidence supporting its track record, some investors are reluctant to embrace value and instead turn to indexing or "value-light" strategies. Such strategies may sidestep the most contentious and volatile stocks; in so doing, we believe they sacrifice the core tenets of the value philosophy and the historical performance advantage of value.

THE PZENA ADVANTAGE

We utilize our proprietary screening tool StockAnalyzer to identify the cheapest 20% of the investment universe and subsequently assign research priority to the most interesting companies from that quintile. At the conclusion of our research process, we have an educated estimate of normalized earnings, as well as a thesis for how company management could turn around the business. We build concentrated portfolios of undervalued businesses, which are typically experiencing issues we deem to be temporary.

We believe that our focus on fundamental research, paired with a disciplined process to uncover ideas across a broad universe, has contributed to the Pzena International Value strategy's strong long-term performance.

All investments involve risk, including loss of principal. Investments may be in a variety of currencies and therefore changes in rates of exchange between currencies may cause the value of investments to decrease or increase. The price of equity securities may rise or fall because of economic or political changes or changes in a company's financial condition, sometimes rapidly or unpredictably. Investments in foreign securities involve political, economic and currency risks, greater volatility and differences in accounting methods. These risks are greater for investments in Emerging Markets. PIM's strategies emphasize a “value” style of investing, which targets undervalued companies with characteristics for improved valuations. This style of investing is subject to the risk that the valuations never improve or that returns on “value” securities may not move in tandem with the returns on other styles of investing or the stock market in general.
